Human geography focuses on human behavior over space and how it affects and is impacted by the natural and built environment, including topics such as population dynamics, culture and diversity, agricultural, industrial and service activities, economic development, cities and urbanization, geopolitical conflicts and human impacts on natural systems.